I think that out of my whole family my cats are the ones who are suffering the most during lockdown. They are suddenly unable to find any space that isn't occupied by humans with the exception of their little catio in the garden and they are making their unhappiness clear by giving us all evil looks. Popo who is the older and fatter of the two has begun to sleep in strange places while Pompom sleeps in her usual spot but with her back to everyone. When this is all over I expect that they will have some sort of party to celebrate getting their house back.

Writing

I would like to know how things are going for you in lockdown. Write a short piece explaining what you are enjoying, what you are missing and what you are looking forward to most when this is all over.
