Prediction

“Now remember,” Mother said, “your father and I are bringing some guests by after the opera, so please keep the house neat.”

“Quite so,” added Father, tucking his scarf inside his coat.

Mother peered into the hall mirror and carefully pinned her hat in place, then knelt and kissed both children goodbye.

What type of story do you think this is?

What can we tell about the characters?

What can we tell about the time it was set in?

What do you think is going to happen?

Write the next part of this story. Think about other stories where children are left alone – what happens? Why does Mother feel the need to warn them to keep the house neat?
